

Established in 1984, Air Met has become one of Australia's market leaders in the supply and service of equipment which protects people in the workplace. Air Met supplies their national client base with solutions to the problems of determining levels of exposure to hazardous substances and physical agents in the environment such as asbestos, toxic gases, sound pressure, carbon monoxide and solvents. The company has expanded to incorporate 6 offices and 28 staff around Australia, yet in their own words, their previous business communications system was 'not keeping up with businesses.
