

In the new global economy with global reach and tough competition and operations, organisations have to adapt and change in order to compete effectively. In order to compete with the global giants, companies have to concentrate on core competencies, and learn to work and collaborate with other organisations that compliment their skills and core activities.